NAACP Milwaukee Branch hosts '2026 We the People' town hall in Milwaukee with Kamala Harris

On October 26, 2026, the "We the People Town Hall" series opened in Milwaukee with a panel featuring former Vice President Kamala Harris and NAACP National President and CEO Derrick Johnson. The event was hosted by Dr. Rev. Joy L. Gallmon at St. Mark AME church, to discuss community experiences, shared priorities, and public participation.

Harris and Johnson helped launch the series designed to connect national questions with what families and neighborhoods experience in daily life. The phrase "We the People" begins the preamble to the United States Constitution, placing the people at the center of the nation's founding framework. As the name of a town hall series, it draws attention to the people whose lives are shaped by public decisions and whose experiences enrich important discussions. Milwaukee's opening event brought that idea into a local setting, linking the city's history of community involvement with conversations about the future. The series begins with a simple principle: listening to communities is an important part of understanding them.

Major League Baseball and Milwaukee Brewers announce World Series Legacy Project contribution to Milwaukee baseball club

On Friday, October 23, 2026, as part of the 122nd World Series presented by Capital One, MLB Together, Major League Baseball's community impact platform, partnered with the Milwaukee Brewers and the Brewers Community Foundation (BCF) to host a Fall Classic Legacy Initiative event honoring the Milwaukee Baseball Club (MBC). Within walking distance of American Family Field, MBC offers local youth year-round access to batting cages, athletic training areas and meeting space. Through its collaboration with MLB's Nike RBI (Reviving Baseball in Inner Cities) program, MBC works to make the sport more accessible and inclusive for low-income families and children of color. To help preserve local youth baseball and ensure long-term support for the facility, MLB Together will present a major Legacy Initiative donation alongside BCF's ongoing multi-year grant.

Those in attendance for the announcement included, MLB Social Responsibility Senior Vice President April Brown; Brewers Community Foundation Executive Director Cecelia Gore; MBC Founder and CEO Julian Haliga; Emcee Josh Maurer; MLB Commissioner's Ambassador Program (CAP) Members; the Johnsonville Famous Racing Sausages and Bernie Brewer.

Gentleman's Sweep? Rays beat Brewers in 12th inning and force World Series to Game 5

Game 5 is Wednesday night at Tropicana Field

Jonny DeLuca and pinch-hitter Ben Williamson singled home runs in a stunning 12th-inning rally, and the Tampa Bay Rays staved off World Series elimination with a 4-3 win over the Milwaukee Brewers on Tuesday night that forced Game 5.

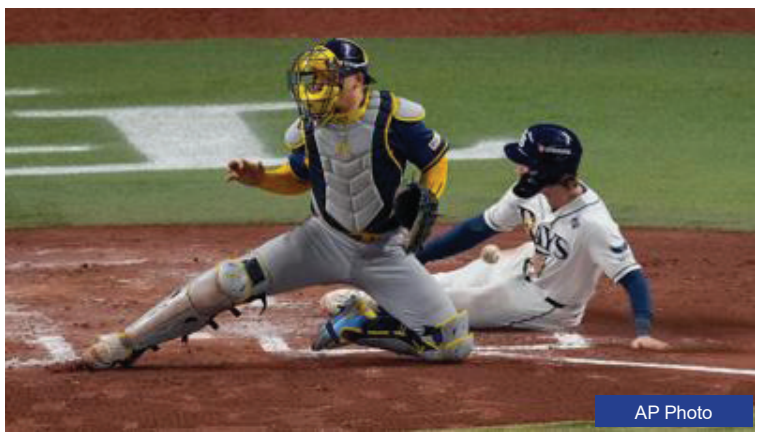

The first inning was scoreless for both teams. But in the second, the Rays' Chandler Simpson doubled on a line drive to right field, scoring Jonny DeLuca, giving Tampa Bay a 1-0 lead.

In the third inning, Jackson Chourio singled on a line drive to right field for the Brewers first hit.

In the fourth, Pratt doubled on a line drive to left field, sending Sal Frelick home and tying the game at 1-1.

Tampa regained the lead in the bottom of the fourth, 2-1.

A solo home run to right center field by Brewers third baseman David Hamilton in the top of the fifth inning tied the game at 2-2.

There was no scoring in the sixth through ninth innings, and the game went into extra innings.

Both teams went three up and three down in the 10th. Neither team scored in the 11th inning, either.

Cooper Pratt hit a solo home run in the top of the 12th inning to put the Brewers ahead 3-2. Then Chourio doubled on a sharp line drive to center field, but Jake Bauers popped up to end the inning.

But the Rays, rallied in the bottom half after a throwing error by third baseman Joey Ortiz on Junior Caminero's leadoff grounder against reliever Antonio Senzatela.

Liam Hicks singled off Shane Drohan, who relieved in his first appearance since Oct. 15, and DeLuca's single to center drove in pinch-runner Cedric Mullins to tie the score at 3.

Chandler Simpson's single loaded the bases and Milwaukee employed a five-man infield with the infield in.

Williamson, who had been 1 for 15 in the postseason, hit a chopper over first baseman Jake Bauers and into right field.

Tampa Bay ended an eight-game winning streak by the Brewers, who were bidding to become only the second team to sweep a League Championship Series and the World Series.

Game 5 will be Wednesday, October 29, 2026 at Tropicana Field.

Racial inequalities persist. A Constitutional Amendment denying it won't help

By Drake Bentley

There will be three confusing questions on your ballot this year. The important thing to know is to vote NO.

The questions, if approved by a majority of voters, would become constitutional amendments. The measures passed the Republican-controlled state Legislature in two consecutive sessions and now it goes to the voters. They really are turnout mechanisms against Democrats more than anything else.

They are worded in a way to make many feel as though you approve, but it's deception. If approved, the consequences would be dire and any opportunity to overturn could be limited.

The three measures address the governor's authority, freedom to gather in places of worship during an emergency and a monumental roll back of a racial reality.

The Milwaukee Courier, Wisconsin's oldest Black newspaper, encourages residents to vote NO on all three questions.

The exact wording of Question 1 is: "Shall section 10 (1) (c) of article V of the constitution be amended to prohibit the governor, in exercising his or her partial veto authority, from creating or increasing or authorizing the creation or increase of any tax or fee?"

Republicans are upset that Gov. Evers used his veto pen during the 2023-2025 budget to raise school revenue limits every year for the next 400 years. The Wisconsin Supreme Court's liberal majority upheld the veto.

Republicans have falsely claimed the veto raises property taxes for 400 years, but it actually raises annual revenue limits, not a specific tax or fee.

State lobbying records show the Wisconsin Education Association Council, the state's largest teachers union, and the League of Women Voters registered in opposition to the question, while conservative business groups are opposed.

The 'Yes We Can' exhibit, which features Barack Obama's run for Presidency is on display inside America's Black Holocaust Museum, photographed during the 16th Annual 'Doors Open Milwaukee' in Milwaukee, Wisconsin on September 26, 2026. (Photo By Raymond Boyd/Getty Images)

The exact wording of Question 2 is: "Shall section 18 of article I of the constitution, which deals with religious liberty, be amended to prohibit the state or a political subdivision of the state from ordering the closure of, or forbidding gatherings in, places of worship in response to a state of emergency, including a public health emergency?"

This stems from lockdown orders by Evers during the COVID-19 pandemic to help stop the spread of the virus. Republican lawmakers believe places of worship should be exempt while ignoring the science.

The amendment is likely a turnout mechanism to mobilize people based on anger over the handling of the pandemic.

Also, the Wisconsin Supreme Court in 2020, under a then-conservative majority, ruled that places of worship were exempt from COVID regulations anyway and it hasn't been challenged since. So, it's unclear what the purpose of the question is.

The League of Women Voters opposed the constitutional amendment, according to state lobbying records, while conservative religious groups are in support.

The exact wording of Question 3 is: "Shall section 27 of article I of the constitution be created to prohibit governmental entities in the state from discriminating against, or granting preferential treatment to, any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin in public employment, public education, public contracting, or public administration?"

To be clear, this question is a clear attack on diversity, equity and inclusion — or DEI — policies and how the state government views racial realities in America.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Wisconsin and the League of Women Voters opposed the constitutional amendment during the legislative process, according to lobbying records, while a conservative law firm is opposed.

Jeff Mandell, general counsel at Law Forward, spoke at length about the problems with Question 3 in an interview with the Courier. Law Forward is a Madison nonprofit that focuses on preserving voting rights, ensuring fair elections, and countering legislative overreach or anti-democratic measures in Wisconsin.

"The amendment purports to bar discrimination in government function, and what's confusing about that is everybody likes that idea, right?" he said. "Nobody thinks we should discriminate. It also suggests that we currently do discriminate or that it's not already illegal for the government to discriminate. But of course it is illegal because of state and federal constitution provisions and laws.

"Really what the purpose of this amendment is to stop the government from considering the reality that we all know, which is that our society remains unequal as a result of our history and policy decisions that have been made in our state and country across time.

"This amendment would put in our constitution that we have to deliberately bury our heads in the sand and refuse to confront those realities. And it would make any attempt to confront those realities a violation of the state constitution, which is deeply problematic.

"We have the largest racial achievement gaps in the country in our public schools. We have significant racial gaps in health outcomes in this state. And when we continue to see significant economic gaps that trace along racial lines too often. We should keep in our toolkit for our government, programs that in very targeted, specific, fact-based ways work to improve and equalize our society by ameliorating some of these gaps that stubbornly persist. And this (amendment) would end that and it would end that as an option for policy makers.

How County Executive David Crowley saved American Family Field and the Milwaukee Brewers

By Drake Bentley

The Milwaukee Brewers are playing in the World Series for the first time in 44 years, but baseball almost left Wisconsin again, if not for the leadership of Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley.

That's according to Gov. Tony Evers and labor union leaders who were involved in the negotiations to extend to keep the Brewers at American Family Field until 2050.

Crowley, now the Democratic nominee for Wisconsin governor, insisted that the county and city tax burden be reduced and there was a moment that no one involved in negotiations got along, according to Evers, but Crowley brought everyone together — for Milwaukee, for Wisconsin, for baseball.

"Everybody was giving their two cents, but he worked together with a bunch of people that were doing everything they could to not work together," Evers told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel last week. "As a result of that, it was a good result. We saved the Brewers. We also got more money, significant money, into all the municipalities, not just Milwaukee County, but the entire state."

In 2023, the deal making process consisted of Milwaukee elected officials, including the mayor, county executive, union officials, and community leaders, as well as Republican and Democratic legislative leaders and the governor.

Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley was "key" in keeping the Milwaukee Brewers in town.
Source: Provided by Crowley campaign

A few months into the process, Crowley said, "I look forward to discussions with partners in the Wisconsin State Legislature and I am willing to work with them to find a common ground, bipartisan solution. However, it is important to recognize Milwaukee County is still facing a significant fiscal deficit over the next several years. Any new proposal by the State of Wisconsin must recognize that reality.

Crowley's motivation was centered on the deal being "good for the taxpayers, good for the state of Wisconsin, in our jurisdiction here within Milwaukee County, but also good for the Brewers." It was not until the deal's county and city tax burdens were reduced that Crowley agreed to the deal.

The $500 million dollar deal that was ultimately struck to renovate and repair the stadium included money from the Brewers, Milwaukee County and city and the state. David's work also led to roughly $240 million in flexible revenue for Milwaukee county, and the revenue generated by the stadium is projected to cover taxpayers' investment.

At the time, Major League Baseball and Brewers ownership considered moving from Milwaukee in 2030 if the deal broke down.

Professional baseball has been played in Milwaukee for nearly 150 years. More recently, from 1953 to 1965, the Milwaukee Braves were in Wisconsin, winning a World Series with Hank Aaron in 1957. But the Braves moved to Atlanta and in 1970, the Seattle Pilots moved to Milwaukee and the name was changed to the Brewers.

Milwaukee returned to the World Series in 1982 but lost. Now, after 44 years, the Brewers are going back and the local economy thanks them.

Each postseason Brewers game at American Family Field will generate an estimated $3.55 million in direct spending at hotels, restaurants and other area businesses, according to Visit Milwaukee. When applying the standard multiplier effect that accounts for those dollars reentering the community, the investment increases to $5.1 million per game.

The direct spending estimate per game includes lodging, $641,634; transportation, $551,301; food and beverage, $655,410; retail, $870,201; recreation, $682,244, business services, $145,402, and space rental, $5,570.

Milwaukee business leaders and owners laud economic impact of Brewers staying in Milwaukee and reaching the World Series this year.

"'When we have teams here, we get more income tax revenue from that.'... Wisconsin had a 'real risk of losing the Bucks and Brewers' franchises...'You can see from the numbers, the economic impact's good and over time, the investment the state has made in American Family Field to keep the Brewers here is showing a good return on investment," said Metropolitan Milwaukee Association of Commerce President and former GOP state senator Dale Kyoonga.

"People are coming into town. We are already getting calls. People out from California," said Third Street Market owner Omar Shaikh. "It's going to be a great influx of people, and we are gearing up. I think we are going to be busy."

"'At the end of the day, if they aren't leveraging this, they are making a marketing mistake, but so far it seems they are doing a great job of it,'" said Marquette University advertising instructor David Hanneken.

Hanneken said a deep playoff run can help increase future revenue, including ticket sales, sponsorships, and in-stadium advertising.

"As they start to get more exposure, they can start to charge more for those sponsorships. They leverage that into the next season,'" he said.

Hanneken pointed to the Kansas City Royals' 2015 World Series win as an example of a smaller-market team seeing financial benefits from a postseason run.

"Their revenue went up over $200 million for being in that postseason," Hanneken said. "What is interesting is the value of the team went up $300 million."

Other businesses — Brat House, Visit Milwaukee, National Bakery, Drop Chocolate, Brew Town Trading Company, Kelly's Bleachers and Scheels in Eau Claire — each lauded the success of keeping the Brewers in Milwaukee for years to come.

Racial inequalities persist

Mandell notes that these efforts, in many ways, are in response to DEI efforts implemented after the Black Lives Matter movement and the murder of George Floyd. But Mandell said lawmakers have long before addressed racial realities through legislation.

"I think it's related to all of those things," he said. "And I think it's also largely an effort to motivate and turn out folks to the polls who are deeply concerned about DEI, or DEIA, efforts.

"But, the reality is that a lot of this is just based on misinformation. For example, Wisconsin has a minority business enterprise program that was created in the '80s because the Legislature found that minority-owned businesses were not getting an expected share of public contracts.

Public contracts in the state of Wisconsin are more than $3 billion a year. So, the idea was that the state was going to create a program that would try to help diversify which suppliers were receiving these contracts and were therefore receiving taxpayer money. This is not a quota system. This is not an effort at what some people would think of as reverse discrimination or anything like that. And yet, we're more than 40 years into this program and the statistics show that still, we have significant barriers to equal participation.

The most recent year that I've seen statistics show less than 6 percent of that contract value went to minority-owned businesses. But minorities are a much larger percentage of the population in Wisconsin than 6 percent, and minority owned businesses are a larger share of our local business communities than 6 percent.

"So there's clearly something that's persisting and that's going wrong and the solution to that is not to put it in the Constitution that we simply have to pretend that everything is as great as it can possibly be. The solution to that is to allow policymakers to continue to have the ability to look carefully at what's happening and to solve the problems in our communities."

Kamala Harris and David Crowley launch canvassers on Milwaukee's Northwest Side

By Drake Bentley

With eight days to go until Election Day, former Vice President Kamala Harris is in Milwaukee on Monday, Oct. 26, to campaign with Democratic nominee for Wisconsin governor David Crowley.

The 2024 Democratic presidential nominee and the Milwaukee County Executive traveled to the Democratic Party of Wisconsin office on Milwaukee's northwest side to launch canvassers ahead of a rally and town hall later in the evening.

"You know him better than most. By character, by conduct, his experience, his passion, his sense of purpose. He's the kind of elected leader that we so desperately need in these most powerful positions," Harris said of Crowley.

This election in Wisconsin is as much as anything about the kind of character and leadership that the people so rightly deserve.

"This election is also about the work that you are doing in an environment where we are witnessing such brutality from so-called leaders."

Harris criticized Crowley's opponent, Republican Congressman Tom Tiffany, and her 2024 opponent, President Donald Trump for cutting billions of dollars from Medicaid and SNAP.

She also said the outcome of the election is so important nationally as Republicans have moved to question the results of elections.

"We are now in an era where we have seen that governors may refuse to certify an election to cheat," Harris said.

Harris hasn't made a decision on if she'll decide to run for the presidency again in the next election cycle.

Crowley rallied his supporters, who cheered and jeered, throughout the short speeches. Harris and Crowley had to head to a rally aimed toward women voters. And Harris is hosting a town hall later this evening with the NAACP.

"She's a huge mentor of mine. My wife loves her," Crowley said of Harris.

"I want you to know that in the next eight days, I am laying it all out on the field. And I have a track record, not only delivering for Milwaukee County but delivering for communities all across the state of Wisconsin. And in order to do those things, we had to bring people to the table.

"I'm in this fight for my family, for your family, for the entire future of Wisconsin. We have to do everything we can to defeat Tom Tiffany, because in the past 15 years, this is the best chance that we've had."

Early voting is underway in Wisconsin. Election Day is Nov. 3.

Obituaries

Remembering the life of Mildred B. Pollard

Mildred B. Pollard, a teacher, volunteer, board member and mother who was a dedicated advocate for children, died quietly on October 19th at Eastcastle Place, the retirement community where she lived. She was 97.

Affectionately called Micki by virtually everyone who knew her, she was active throughout her life in a host of social and cultural organizations, as both a volunteer and a member. She sat on the boards of the Milwaukee Urban League and the Red Cross in Milwaukee. She was a charter member of local chapters of The Links, Incorporated and The Girlfriends, national organizations devoted to community service. She was a teen adviser for Jack and Jill of America and a scout leader and board member for the Girl Scouts. She was a volunteer and board member for the Milwaukee Ballet Company and frequent usher for the Milwaukee Repertory Theater. In 2024, she was named a Diamond Soror by Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc, in honor of her 75 years of continuous service.

Mrs. Pollard also broke barriers. She was the first black member of the prestigious Woman's Club of Wisconsin. She often joked that she fit right in with the other white-haired ladies. She made it her mission to encourage other women of color, particularly young professionals , to seek membership in the club. She was also the first black docent at the Milwaukee Art Museum. For two decades, she gave engaging tours and especially enjoyed using her experience as a teacher and her extensive knowledge of the museum's collection to introduce children to the world of art. In addition, she was a founding member of the African American Art Alliance at the museum.

Born and raised in Chicago, she was the only child of Samuel and Emily Brawner (nee Mills). Her father died when she was 5 from complications of a car accident; her mother died 12 years later at the age of 34. Her mother's first cousin, Lottie Carraway, took charge of her upbringing. Aunt Lottie, as she called her, was Dean of Women at Huston-Tillotson College. Aunt Lottie made sure that she got a proper education, socially as well as academically. As other members of her family had done before her, she attended Clark College in Atlanta. While at Clark she joined Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Alpha Pi Chapter and was also Miss Clark College, both in 1949. She received her bachelor's degree in 1950. After college, she taught in the Chicago Public Schools for several years. During that time, a college friend introduced her to a young doctor named Randle E. Pollard, who was gaining additional training in surgery and urology. They fell in love and were married on Valentine's Day in 1954. In the next few years, they moved to Milwaukee where he planned to set up his medical practice. She taught in the public schools, and they began a family.

As their family grew to include four children, she more and more became a stay-at-home mom. She ran the household and got her children to band or football practice and Jack and Jill parties on weekends. Later, it was summer camps and road trips for college tours. The tragic deaths of her parents had taught her the importance of family, and now she was passing that value on to her children. With her children grown, she had more time to devote to her many activities outside the home, and even decades later her generosity and enthusiasm for them never waned.

She and Dr. Pollard, a highly regarded urological surgeon in Milwaukee, led active social lives. They traveled the world, several times over. Pillars of their community, they attended galas and fundraisers. Together they enjoyed good food, dancing, entertaining and visiting their grandchildren. Dr. Pollard, her husband of 67 years, died in 2021.

She is survived by her daughters, Karol J. Roberts (Fletcher), of Baltimore; Emily F. Pollard (Robert Wilensky), of Philadelphia; JoAnne M. Williamson (Ronald), of Mequon, and a son, Randle B. Pollard (Juval Scott), of Montclair, N.J.; 7 grandchildren and 2 great grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers the family asks that donations be made to the Mildred Brawner Pollard Scholarship at Clark Atlanta University and the Randle and Micki Pollard Scholarship at EastCastle Place. Private interment will take place at the Southern Wisconsin Veterans Memorial Cemetery in Union Grove.

Growing up on Chicago's South Side, she knew of three other Mildred's, and wanting to distinguish herself from them, she became Micki. From Miss Clark to Urban League board to PTA president , Micki has always stood out, and she always will.

Local pioneering CEO Daphne Jones passes at 76

Second generation leader expanded Milwaukee-based Glorious Malone's Fine Sausage

Daphne Jones, president and CEO of Milwaukee-based Glorious Malone's Fine Sausage, transitioned on Monday, October 19. She was 76 and died at home surrounded by family after an extended illness as a result of heart disease.

In a statement released by the family, her daughters, Dasha Kelly and Tamu Jones, remembered their mother as kind, generous, determined, magical and loving.

It is with profound sadness that we announce the transition of our beloved wife, mother, grandmother, sister and friend, Daphne Jones.

Daphne Jones carried forward the legacy her parents began with determination, heart, and an unwavering commitment to growing their business across all 50 states. But her legacy extends far beyond her entrepreneurial success. She demonstrated that kindness and generosity cost nothing, yet their impact can multiply a hundredfold.

Her team, business partners, neighbors, family, and friends will remember her not only as a successful small business owner, but as a woman of integrity who believed in Milwaukee, saw its potential, and was committed to making it a better place for everyone.

To experience Daphne's magical, inventive spirit and tenacious determination was to witness a woman who could see possibilities where others saw limitations. She had the heart, creativity, and courage to bring those possibilities to life.

"Though we will miss her presence, her laughter, and her joy, the love she shared, the lives she touched, and the example she set will live on in our hearts forever."

Ms. Jones took over the business in 2007 following the death of her mother, who started the company in 1961 from her kitchen and then shifted to a store on N. 6th and W. Hadley streets in Harambee. Now located at 300 W. Walnut Street, Glorious Malone's produces about 1,500 pounds of head-cheese every week, shipping the product throughout the country.

Glorious Malone was the first Black woman to become both a state and federally-certified meat producer in the late 1970s. She battled city officials in the late 1980s when she wanted to build the company's production facility in Bronzeville. The company opened its plant at the corner of W. Walnut and N. Dr. Martin Luther King Drive in 1993.

Under Daphne Jones' leadership, the company had global ambitions and prospered under a new name. She told a reporter in a 2019 interview that it was a way of honoring her mother and her legacy. "I decided to rename it and call it 'Glorious Malone's Fine Sausage' because it had two meanings. It was her name, Glorious and it is a glorious product, right?"

The business was featured in a BMO Harris Bank national marketing campaign about small businesses in 2022. She described the company's product in a Wisconsin PBS story three years ago. "Headcheese makes people's minds think of all kinds of things. But if I can present it to you as 'this is our gourmet pork delicacy,' you might be able to say, okay, I might give it a try."

The company will continue into the future as a family-owned and family-led company.

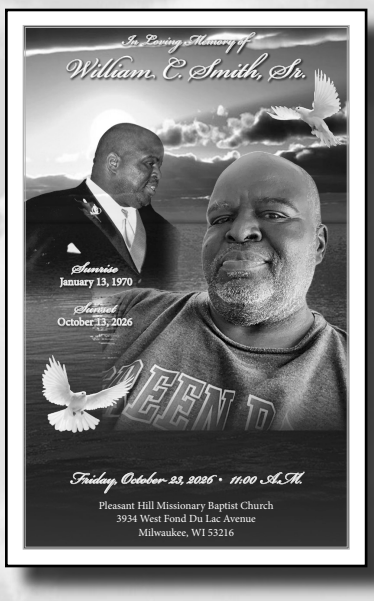

Daphne Jones was the oldest child of George and Glorious Malone. After graduating from Milwaukee Lutheran High School, she earned a Bachelor's degree in Management and Human Resources from Park University outside of Kansas City, Mo. She also completed leadership programs at Cardinal Stritch University and Babson College.

She married Rodrick Jones in 1969 and they had two daughters, Dasha Kelly and Tamu Jones. They divorced in 2002. In 2022, she married Richard Byhre, who died in 2023. She is survived by her first husband, daughters, grandchildren Sydney Kelly and Myla Jones, siblings Denise Suttle and Derek Malone, and dozens of nieces and nephews.

Daphne Jones was named a Women of Influence by the Milwaukee Business Journal in 2018. She also received special recognition from Cong. Gwen Moore, the Governor's Trailblazer Award from Gov. Scott Walker, and an Emerging Leaders proclamation from Mayor Tom Barrett. A memorial celebration will take place in November.
