"We Are the Drum" takes audience on a musical journey through black history

Talented Milwaukee singers, dancers, actors, and choreographers presented this year's production of "We Are the Drum." This annual high-energy musical revue was an exciting evening of music and dance in a community setting. Performances ran from February 23–March 3, 2025, at Milwaukee Marshall High School, at 4141 N. 64th St. This year's theme was "The Rhythm of Our State."

Students of all ages from several Milwaukee Public Schools performed in this year's show. Many have extensive training and talent, and the event also included emerging young artists with no prior singing or dancing experience. Show organizers set high standards each year to offer a theater experience that rivals a Las Vegas production.

"We Are the Drum" is a community program offered by CAPITA Productions, a nonprofit organization with the mission of bridging cultural gaps, uniting Milwaukee area youth, and offering a constructive outlet for creative expression. The name CAPITA stands for City at Peace in the Arts.

CAPITA organizers and directors have been recruiting students, hosting rehearsals, coaching students, and preparing for the show for several months. Talented staff members and volunteers bring their energy to develop the talents of children who participate. CAPITA does not charge fees for children who take part in the show.

Community Huddle hosts Deputy Sheriff Naquianna Jefferson, first black female technician for Milwaukee SWAT

Event Photos

On Friday, February 28, 2025, 5th grade girls at William Cullen Bryant School got the opportunity to hear Milwaukee County Sheriff's Deputy Naquianna Jefferson talk about how she became the first African American female Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) technician in Milwaukee County at the age of 30. This event was part of the Community Huddle 'B. Marshall Scholar' Black History-Maker Speaker series. The series was presented by Rev. Byron Marshall, associate minister at Mt. Zion Missionary Baptist Church and executive director and founder of Community Huddle. "The purpose for the event was for the students to gain career and education insights, and to learn more about Deputy Jefferson's journey toward making history," explained Rev. Marshall.

Deputy Jefferson was also presented The Black History-Maker Award by Rev. Byron Marshall for her groundbreaking achievement of shattering glass ceilings through dedication, skill, and perseverance in a demanding field traditionally underrepresented by women of color. Her accomplishment not only paves the way for future generations but also reflects the growing diversity and inclusivity within law enforcement. Rev. Marshall also gifted Deputy Jefferson with another history-maker' and first black woman to serve on the Supreme Court, Ketanji Brown Jackson's book entitled: Lovely One. Constitutional amendment asked to enshrine WI's voter ID law into state constitution

In person early voting begins Tuesday, March 18, 2025 ahead of the April 1 election

In-person absentee voting began Tuesday, March 18, 2025, ahead of the April 1 election, which features several statewide races, including for Wisconsin Supreme Court.

Wisconsin voters will also be asked whether to enshrine the state's current voter ID law, which requires a photo identification to vote, into the state constitution.

The ballot question asks:

Web Photo

QUESTION 1: Photographic identification for voting. Shall section 1m of article III of the constitution be created to require that voters present valid photographic identification verifying their identity in order to vote in any election, subject to exceptions which may be established by law?

"I think the majority party is afraid of what happens if we get into the majority and if we decide that existing law needs to be amended, changed or overturned entirely," State Rep. Lee Snodgrass (D-Appleton) said during a forum in Milwaukee Monday, March 17, 2025.

Democrats are advocating a "no" vote, while Republicans are urging Wisconsinites to vote "yes."

"Trying to take this away from the hyper-partisan issues that the court tends to inject into it, the legislature should be the ones making the decisions instead of the courts," State Rep. Scott Krug (R-Rome) said during the same forum.

The issue has become a key part of the Wisconsin Supreme Court race between liberal candidate Susan Crawford and conservative Brad Schimel.

Crawford had previously opposed the law and argued against it in court, and Schimel, a former Republican attorney general who fought to keep the law intact, both laid out their positions during their only debate last week on WISN 12.

"I just don't think it's appropriate for a judge to weigh in and try to influence voters on something like that," Crawford said.

"I'm going to vote yes," Schimel responded. "Voter integrity laws are critically impotent."

Milwaukee prepares to host NCAA tournament games

Fiserv Forum to host two rounds of Big Dance

The madness in March is hitting Milwaukee.

Fiserv Forum, home of the Milwaukee Bucks, will host two rounds of the NCAA basketball tournament this weekend.

"Milwaukee's always been a great host, but since Fiserv Forum has opened, it's become a whole new level of experience with the student athletes of NCAA," said Sports Milwaukee Director Marissa Werner.

Web Photo

Werner said they're expecting about 19,000 people in Milwaukee this weekend with some visitors buying tickets for both days, Friday and Sunday.

"It is going to be a great, great weekend for our whole area; yes, we're very excited," said Werner.

The economic impact is estimated at around $3.4-million.

Wisconsin is also hosting other big sporting events this year:

- The U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship in May at Erin Hills
- The NFL Draft in April at Lambeau Field
- IndyCar in April at The Milwaukee Mile

"This is the year of sport for Milwaukee and Wisconsin, overall," said Werner.

CHILD WATCH

Remembering Selma

Sixty years ago, on Sunday, March 7, 1965, John Lewis and Reverend Hosea Williams set out on a nonviolent march with a group of 600 men, women, young people, and children headed from Selma, Alabama, to the state capital in Montgomery. They were seeking the right to vote and protesting the tragic death of Jimmie Lee Jackson, a 26-year-old black church deacon and military veteran who had died February 26 from injuries he received eight days earlier when he, his mother, sister, and 82-year-old grandfather attended a nonviolent voting rights demonstration that was attacked by law enforcement officials. Jackson was beaten and shot by an Alabama state trooper while trying to shield his mother from a police nightstick. As the marchers left Selma's Brown Chapel AME Church on the morning of March 7 and headed to cross the Edmund Pettus Bridge, they were also immediately met by lawless state and local law enforcement officials and brutally attacked. The televised images of "Bloody Sunday" and the savage beatings of the marchers—including John Lewis, whose skull was fractured—were a pivotal moment in the Civil Rights Movement and in America's struggle to become America.

Two weeks later, I traveled from Mississippi to Alabama to join John Lewis, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and about 25,000 fellow citizens to walk the 54 miles from Selma to Montgomery and complete that March. This time we were safer thanks to Federal District Court Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr.'s order that we had a right to peaceful protest, and with National Guard protection. And we were buoyed by President Johnson's March 15th Special Message to a Joint Session of Congress, "T*he American Promise*," calling on Congress to pass what became the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

In that speech President Johnson said: "This was the first nation in the history of the world to be founded with a purpose. The great phrases of that purpose still sound in every American heart, North and South: 'All men are created equal'—'government by consent of the governed'—'give me liberty or give me death'. . . Those words are a promise to every citizen that he shall share in the dignity of man." He continued: "To apply any other test—to deny a man his hopes because of his color or race, his religion or the place of his birth—is not only to do injustice, it is to deny America and to dishonor the dead who gave their lives for American freedom." He said on the "issue of equal rights," "should we defeat every enemy, should we double our wealth and conquer the stars, and still be unequal to this issue, then we will have failed as a people and as a nation." The address is a profound contrast to the message of today's President.

As Dr. King spoke to the crowd at the end of the exhilarating Selma to Montgomery March, like President Johnson, he reminded us that the work was not yet done. Dr. King said: "Let us therefore continue our triumphant march to the realization of the American dream. Let us march on segregated housing until every ghetto or social and economic depression dissolves, and Negroes and whites live side by side in decent, safe, and sanitary housing. Let us march on segregated schools until every vestige of segregated and inferior education becomes a thing of the past . . . Let us march on poverty until no American parent has to skip a meal so that their children may eat . . . Let us march on ballot boxes until we send to our city councils, state legislatures, and the United States Congress men who will not fear to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God."

Sixty years later, instead of making sure no child's hopes will be denied in America because of color, race, religion, or place of birth, the same categories and more are being used in new ways to try to erase and exclude. Racial inequities in education, housing, and other measures still loom large, but face new prohibitions on attempts to acknowledge them, study them, or correct them. Voting rights remain under attack, and voting rights protections, including those created in the 1965 Voting Rights Act, have continued to be weakened. And we remain in desperate need of more leaders who will not fear to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with their God. But the courage that propelled the Selma marchers forward in the face of brutal systemic resistance must keep pushing all Americans closer to the day our nation finally realizes President Johnson's American promise and Dr. King's American dream.

Our Community Voices

The stakes are high: Wisconsin's Supreme Court election on April 1st

By Walter J. Lanier

Some of us saw this coming. We raised concerns, we asked questions, and yet, here we are. The decisions being made at the highest levels of government are reshaping the very foundation of our democracy. And now, those same forces have their sights set on Wisconsin.

Let's talk about what's happening.

During the recent ABC News Presidential Debate, former President Donald Trump stated:

"I have nothing to do with Project 2025. I haven't read it. I don't want to read it purposely. I'm not going to read it."

Yet, many of the actions we see unfolding today align closely with that very agenda. Across the country, we're witnessing major shifts—federal employees being dismissed, critical programs under threat, and key leadership positions being filled by individuals with little experience but strong ideological ties.

Now, Wisconsin is at a crossroads.

Why the Wisconsin Supreme Court race matters

On April 1st, 2025, voters in Wisconsin will decide the future direction of our state's highest court. The outcome will have far-reaching implications for voting rights, workers' protections, healthcare, and the balance of power in our state.

One of the key players investing heavily in this race is billionaire Elon Musk. His allies have made it clear that electing Brad Schimel to the Wisconsin Supreme Court is essential to advancing their broader agenda—one that aligns with efforts to limit government oversight, reduce social safety nets, and consolidate power.

This isn't speculation. These are the policies being actively pursued:

• Cuts to Medicaid, Social Security, and Medicare – Programs that millions have paid into and rely on.

• Reductions in education funding – Limiting opportunities for students across Wisconsin.

• Threats to healthcare access – Including BadgerCare and other critical services.

• Job cuts for federal and public workers – Impacting air safety, veterans' services, and public lands.

The justification for these cuts? To finance tax breaks that overwhelmingly benefit the wealthiest individuals and corporations.

The power of your vote

Misinformation is everywhere, and it's easy to get caught up in divisive rhetoric. But here's the truth: The policies being enacted today will affect all of us, regardless of political affiliation. The stakes are real, and the consequences will be felt in our communities, our schools, and our healthcare systems.

This is about more than politics—it's about ensuring that Wisconsin remains a place where fairness, opportunity, and justice guide our future.

So, what can we do?

• Stay informed – Learn about the candidates and what they stand for.

• Have conversations – Engage with family and friends about why this election matters.

• Make a plan to vote – Every vote counts, and Wisconsin's future is in our hands.

Visit SoulstothePolls.org/votecenter for voting information and resources.

This April 1st, let's show up—not just for ourselves, but for our neighbors, our families, and future generations.

"Every great dream begins with a dreamer. Always remember, you have within you the strength, the patience, and the passion to reach for the stars to change the world."

—Harriet Tubman

Let's groove tonight: Motown and the Philly Sound with your MSO

Within a few years of its inception in the early 1960s, Detroit's Motown record label was already molding the sounds that would define an entire generation of pop artists; and with the founding of Sigma Sound studio in Philadelphia at the end of the decade, America was well on its way to enjoying one of its most sensational musical revolutions. Join your Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra (MSO) this May 23-25 and indulge in the lush string arrangements and brassy soundscapes that distinguished the funk, soul, and R&B renaissance that reimagined the possibilities of popular music.

Let's Groove Tonight treats audiences to a round-up of the greatest hits of soul's golden era: singles like Smokey Robinson's "My Girl," Diana Ross's "I'm Coming Out," Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff's "Love Train," and Gene McFadden and John Whitehead's "Ain't No Stoppin' Us Now" are brought to life by the instrumental luster of your hometown symphony orchestra. Listeners can move, groove, and revel in the splendor of a bygone era as the MSO fills Allen-Bradley Hall with an entirely new take on the bold, colorful charts that illuminated radio airwaves around the nation.

Concluding his first season as the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra's Stein Family Foundation Principal Pops Conductor, critically acclaimed trumpet virtuoso and bandleader Byron Stripling (whose credits range from the Count Basie Orchestra to Carnegie Hall) shares the stage with Broadway headliner Chester Gregory and vocal virtuosos Ashley Jayy and Brik Liam for a blockbuster performance that's sure to delight fans from all walks of life. Tickets for the MSO's Pops series performances start at just $30 — so be sure to call, click, or visit the Bradley Symphony Center Box Office (212 W. Wisconsin Avenue) today to make musical memories that last a lifetime.

Let's Groove Tonight: Motown & The Philly Sound performance dates:

Friday, May 23 at 7:30 p.m.
Saturday, May 24 at 7:30 p.m.
Sunday, May 25 at 2:30 p.m.

Tickets: Secure your seats today at mso.org or by contacting the MSO Box Office at 414-291-7605 or tickets@mso.org. Regular office hours are Monday - Friday 10:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m., Saturday 12:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m., and 90 minutes before all MSO performances.

Welcome, Dr. Cassellius! New MPS superintendent visits North Division, Bethune

Dr. Brenda Cassellius has officially started in her new role as Milwaukee Public Schools (MPS) superintendent. Her first stops on March 17, 2025, were North Division High School and Bethune Academy to see programs in action.

At North Division, Dr. Cassellius first met with school leadership and representatives from the Superintendent's Student Advisory Council (SSAC). She then toured geometry, art, and physical education spaces, checked out the renovated swimming pool, learned about programs in construction and welding, and experienced the Wisconsin Bike Fed program and the high school's nursing lab and dental clinic.

Moving on to Bethune Academy, Dr. Cassellius enjoyed lunch with students in K3, K4, and grade 7 before touring the playground and early childhood wing and taking part in an art class. The visit was capped off by a roundtable discussion in the library with students and staff.

Dr. Cassellius has more visits scheduled throughout the rest of the week and has voiced her commitment to leveraging district strengths and making a difference for students and staff.

Creative Allies program expands arts opportunities for students

Milwaukee Recreation (MKE REC) works to ensure all young people have access to showcase their talents, skills, and passions. Through the Creative Allies program, Milwaukee Recreation supports after-school sites within Milwaukee Public Schools (MPS) by providing additional arts opportunities for students.

Created in partnership between Milwaukee Recreation and the Milwaukee Institute of Art & Design (MIAD), this program connects with MIAD's advanced art and design students, as well as students from UW-Milwaukee's Peck School of the Arts, to share their creative expertise with MPS students and bridge the gap at schools with limited art and music opportunities. Throughout the program, students engage with mentors from MIAD and UWM to learn about various art disciplines and explore new materials and techniques.

Since the launch of the Creative Allies program last year, Milwaukee Recreation has nearly doubled its reach for schools looking to expand their arts opportunities, giving more students in Milwaukee the opportunity to further explore extracurricular activities in the arts. This year, 11 art educators are working with 10 different after-school sites throughout the city.

Emily Camp, an illustration and animation student from MIAD and art educator at Cooper Elementary School, was initially introduced to the Creative Allies program as a new way to combine her passion for art with her curiosity for teaching. "I've always wanted to try teaching; that was always a career prospect for me," Camp said. "My educational career has sort of just been balancing and strengthening my own private practice, and then when I can, also exploring what being a teacher is and how that feels. So Creative Allies was a good fit for me."

MIAD and UWM art educators collaborate with after-school staff at their assigned site to align with site-specific needs and student interests. This collaboration is a vital component of the Creative Allies program, and allows both staff and participating artists to ensure students are always accommodated and considered throughout the process.

After talking with site staff about their need to provide students with new ways to grow their writing and reading comprehension skills, recent MIAD graduate and Thurston Woods School art educator Darienne Hood crafted a set of activities that encourage students to create their own narrative stories, accompanied by drawings. When asked about their favorite part of participating in the Creative Allies program after school, students at Thurston Woods emphasized they loved having a chance to free draw while also creating their own stories.

"The way that I help is through art," Hood said. "I love having them do those projects so then they can have that outlet, that safe space, and just explore who they are as individuals."

For many young people interested in the arts, opportunities created by this initiative serve as a way for students to express themselves or discover new passions. This program fosters a sense of community and belonging for students that aids in the development of skills such as teamwork, communication, and critical thinking.

"They just love making art and using their hands," Camp said about her students at Cooper, "and I can tell that they need it after a long day of thinking with their 'school brains.' It's really important, I think, for kids to have that outlet for themselves and to know that they can create something, and to be able to see that they have made something they can call their own."

Participants at Cooper also emphasized their excitement to come to class each week and learn something new about art. Some students also went on to state that participating in Creative Allies gives them time to utilize materials they don't have access to at home, fulfilling one of the program's goals to provide equal access to quality art-making experiences.

"I want them to have access to all of these things, and while teaching them how to use colored pencils or alcohol markers, I emphasize that they can invent their own techniques. This is the time to play and to explore and not to be held to a rigid expectation of themselves," Camp said.

Like many of Milwaukee Recreation's before- and after-school programs, the Creative Allies program gives students an engaging environment to socialize, learn, and develop their skills during after-school hours, while also offering a unique opportunity for mentorship. Thank you to all of our art educators – Izaiah Castillo, Emily Camp, Brittnie Reisinger, Avery Aust, Clementine Penner, Ellee Spalding, Darienne Hood, Anna Mikula, Connor Schuberth, Ashley Keegstra, and Olivia Brown – for your time and dedication to Milwaukee's next generation of artists.

"I just really love doing this and seeing the kids open up about different things," Hood said. "You never know what you're gonna get with each student… It's really fun to break them out of their mold, break them out of their shell, and just see them through their art, and then slowly see them start to come alive and interact with other students."

Reclaiming our rest: How better sleep can transform black health

Sleep deprivation is more than just an inconvenience—it's a silent killer that disproportionately impacts black Americans. Contributing to higher rates of heart disease, diabetes, obesity, and mental health challenges, poor sleep is an overlooked public health crisis in our community.

Overview

Sleep deprivation has quietly evolved into a public health epidemic for black Americans. New research and historical insights show that systemic racism, chronic stress, and environmental factors are at the heart of this crisis. Renowned health advocate Dick Gregory once warned that sleep deprivation was the leading cause of death in America, urging us all to prioritize rest for optimal health and longevity.

A 2024 USA Today article further confirms what many in our community have long known: black individuals experience shorter, less restorative sleep. Economic inequality, residential segregation, and the constant stress from discrimination all play significant roles in this disparity.

Understanding the sleep-health connection

Sleep deprivation isn't just about feeling tired—its impact runs deep in our bodies and minds. Here's how poor sleep affects us:

- Cognitive decline: Insufficient sleep impairs focus, memory, and decision-making, affecting everything from work performance to personal safety.
- Hormonal imbalance: When we don't sleep enough, our bodies struggle with insulin regulation, significantly increasing the risk of diabetes.
- Cardiovascular strain: Chronic lack of sleep raises blood pressure and fuels inflammation, setting the stage for heart disease.
- Emotional instability: Poor sleep can intensify anxiety, depression, and mood swings, making it harder to cope with daily stresses.

Dick Gregory emphasized the power of aligning our sleep with the body's natural rhythms. He advocated for going to bed about 90 minutes after sunset—when melatonin production peaks—to help our brains and bodies fully recharge.

Scientific insights on sleep disparities

Recent studies provide compelling evidence of how systemic issues directly affect the sleep of black Americans. The 2024 study by Venkataramani et al. reveals that the psychological trauma from exposure to police violence—such as the killing of unarmed black individuals—leads to increased reports of short and fragmented sleep. Complementing this, the 2022 study by Caraballo et al. demonstrates that over 15 years, black Americans have consistently experienced insufficient sleep compared to their white counterparts.

These studies align closely with the everyday realities of black American life. The chronic stress from systemic discrimination, economic hardship, and community-wide trauma manifests in disrupted sleep patterns. When external pressures constantly challenge our sense of safety and stability, our bodies struggle to achieve the deep, restorative sleep necessary for healing and resilience. In this way, the data underscores how the fight for social justice is intimately linked with the battle for better health—and better sleep.

Barriers to quality sleep

Several unique challenges disrupt the sleep of black Americans:

- Environmental stressors: Many live in neighborhoods where noise, pollution, and bright street lights at night are constant disruptors.
- Economic inequality: Irregular work schedules, night shifts (the graveyard shift), and job insecurity often mean inconsistent and insufficient sleep.
- Healthcare disparities: Limited access to sleep clinics and specialists means sleep disorders can go undiagnosed and untreated.
- Psychological burden: The relentless stress of racial discrimination and microaggressions raises cortisol levels, directly impairing sleep quality.

Hidden sleep disruptors

Beyond these major barriers, everyday habits and lifestyle choices can also quietly sabotage our sleep:

- Caffeine and sugar: Overconsumption overstimulates the nervous system, keeping our bodies on high alert.
- Screen Time: The blue light from our phones and tablets suppresses melatonin, the hormone that helps us fall asleep.
- Irregular Sleep Patterns: Skipping around with inconsistent bedtimes disrupts our natural circadian rhythms.
- Poor diet: Nutrient deficiencies—especially in magnesium and vitamin D—can hinder our ability to get a deep, restorative sleep.
- Anxiety: Research suggests that nearly one in five black Americans experience significant anxiety. This heightened state of worry and hyperarousal can keep the body in a constant state of alert, making it even more difficult to unwind and fall asleep.

Call to action

This is a call to reclaim our rest and our health. Sleep deprivation isn't just a minor inconvenience—it's a public health crisis that demands our attention. Here's what we can do:

- Educate: Understand how systemic racism contributes to sleep disparities and worsens health outcomes.
- Inform: Recognize and address everyday stressors that disrupt our sleep.
- Empower: Take actionable steps to improve sleep quality. Embrace sleep hygiene practices, such as maintaining consistent sleep schedules and optimizing your sleep environment with tools like streetlight-blocking window covers and mindfulness techniques. Importantly, strive to align your sleep with your natural circadian rhythm—aim to be in bed about 90 minutes after sundown when possible to harness the peak of melatonin production.
- Monitor: Limit constant news alerts and social media updates by turning off notifications or enabling your phone's night mode features to disable app alerts, reducing the digital noise that disrupts our rest.
- Connect: Support and participate in community initiatives designed to promote better sleep health for all.

By blending personal insights, scientific research, and practical solutions, we can spark awareness, inspire healthier habits, and advocate for equitable health policies that uplift our community. Let's work together to ensure that the rest we get isn't a luxury—but a vital part of our well-being.

Remember, when we reclaim our rest, we reclaim our power. It's time to prioritize sleep as a cornerstone of black health and a fundamental step toward achieving health equity.

EMPOWERMENT
SMALL BUSINESS LOAN PROGRAM

Minority and Women-Owned Businesses: Borrow Up to $5 Million[1]

At Old National Bank, we believe that businesses in greater Milwaukee deserve the opportunity to change their community in a big way.

PRESENTING THE EMPOWERMENT SMALL BUSINESS LOAN PROGRAM

We strengthen all our communities when we provide access to capital for traditionally underserved businesses. This program offers expanded credit guidelines[2] and modified collateral requirements on several loan types:

- Lines of Credit
- Equipment Financing
- Owner-Occupied Real Estate
